

Abstract

A method of separating one or more solid compound from an adduct is provided.

More specifically, the present invention provides a method of separating one or more 5 solid compounds from an adduct by crystallization wherein certain phase equilibrium conditions are selectively controlled.